EXPLORING THE FUTURE OF INSTITUTIONAL DIALOGUE

28 SEPTEMBER 2020

FORMAL OPENING OF CS20

9:00

THE URGENCY OF DIALOGUE

9:00

Moderated Discussion

ICT-related incidents involving States both before and during the Covid-19 pandemic have added to the urgency of calls to establish institutional dialogue within the United Nations and strengthen dialogue at regional and sub-regional levels. At the same time, however, the global backdrop to these calls has grown difficult: a shifting international security and normative environment in which dialogue between States, the major powers in particular, is stalling; growing discontent with - or disregard for - multilateralism, with actors, frameworks and interconnections more complex and divides - digital or otherwise - between States more evident.

The speakers will explore the opportunities and challenges of establishing dialogue among States and between States and other actors in the current environment; the feasibility of facilitating or establishing dialogue between States; the involvement of actors other than States in dialogue; and the international security implications if dialogue between relevant actors is not feasible or if dialogue breaks down.

THE PURPOSES & GOALS OF DIALOGUE

Panel I

Dialogue between States has historically been critical to addressing global challenges, particularly those with a bearing on international security. This panel will discuss the specific purposes or goals of establishing dialogue on ICTs and international security. Questions include, for instance, whether a more formalized dialogue under the auspices of the UN would serve as a precursor to a more formal agreement or arrangement, or if it would simply serve as an ongoing platform for States to exchange views on different issues relevant to ICTs and international security, such as information sharing on existing and emerging threats, norm and CBM implementation, exchanges of good practices, capacity building gaps and opportunities. Panelists will also be asked to consider linkages between institutional dialogue relevant to ICTs and international security and other core pillars of the UN's work.

INCLUSIVITY IN DIALOGUE

Panel II

Over the past decade, the United Nations and other multilateral organizations have placed significant emphasis on ensuring greater inclusivity in their work. This panel will explore the relevance and purpose of this emphasis to ICTs and international security in the context of the two ongoing processes at the UN and discussions on regular institutional dialogue, with a specific focus on geographical, gender and sectoral representation.

INSTITUTIONAL DIALOGUES WITH THE UN: LESSONS AND OPPORTUNITIES

Panel III

Are there established practices regarding institutional dialogue within or beyond the United Nations that can inform current discussions on establishing institutional dialogue on ICTs in the context of international security? This session will discuss existing experiences, including the opportunities derived from establishing a more institutionalized form of dialogue, the principles and criteria that informed the 'how', 'where' and 'who' in the design of the process, as well as some of the key lessons and challenges encountered.

DIALOGUES ON ICTS AND INTERNATIONAL SECURITY AT REGIONAL AND BI-LATERAL LEVEL 15:15

Panel IV

A number of regions host institutional dialogues on ICTs and international security, using existing regional and sub-regional arrangements for that purpose. Many States, too, are involved in a broad range of dialogues through pluri-lateral or bi-lateral arrangements, some of which have led to important agreements. Others less so.

This panel will focus on the lessons that can be drawn from these experiences. For instance, what criteria do States or groups of States bear in mind when assessing their options for entering into dialogue on issues pertaining to ICTs and international security such as norms or CBMs? Under current circumstances, what issue areas are likely to wield most progress in dialogue? In what manner or to what extent can the engagement of other actors - for instance, para-diplomatic activity such as track 1.5 or track 2 dialogues - contribute to strengthening dialogue between States regionally or bi-laterally?

Panel V

On the basis of the experiences and lessons on dialogue relevant to ICTs and international security discussed throughout the day, the final panel of the day will tackle questions such as what future can we envisage for dialogue on these matters, including within the UN? What are the potential opportunities and challenges of establishing regular institutional dialogue on ICTs and international security within the UN? How might such a dialogue fit into the broader eco- system of dialogues on ICT/cyber matters and vice versa?

MICHELE MARKOFF

ACTING COORDINATOR FOR CYBER ISSUES,
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE

MICHELE MARKOFF is the Acting Coordinator for Cyber Issues at the U.S. Department of State. Since 1998 Michele has been the senior State Department subject matter expert overseeing the development and implementation of foreign policy initiatives on cyber issues. She helps to coordinate United States policy on cyber policy issues and develops diplomatic strategies to encourage states to join the United States in taking steps to protect their critical networks and to cooperate internationally to enhance and preserve global cyber stability. She implements those strategies through negotiations in a wide variety of venues. Her initiative led to the successful completion of the first ever bilateral agreement on confidence-building in cyber space between the United States and the Russian Federation, announced in June 2013. Michele also has been the United States Government Expert on five Groups of UN Government Experts (2005, 2010, 2013, 2015, 2016) devoted to international security cyber issues.
