Global Conference on AI, Security and Ethics

27-28 March 2025　—　Palais des Nations, Geneva, Switzerland

UNIDIR is launching its first annual Global Conference on AI, Security and Ethics to address the complex implications of AI for national, regional and global security and resilience. The conference – organized as part of the Roundtable for AI, Security and Ethics – will bring together the diplomatic community, as well as experts from the military, industry, academia, civil society and research labs.

As a voluntarily funded institute, UNIDIR relies on the generous financial contributions of donors to carry out its mandate and activities. To support the successful organization of the global conference, UNIDIR is launching a Call for Sponsorships seeking funding from States, foundations, the private sectors, individuals and other regional and international organizations.

Sponsoring the global conference

There is no set minimum sponsorship amount; all contributions are welcome and will be used to:

- Support the in-person participation of thought leaders, rising scholars and renowned experts – particularly from the Global South – fostering meaningful and inclusive dialogue.
- Enhance the quality of the conference's discussions through increased visibility and robust communications support.
- Maximize impact through the production of the conference's outputs, ultimately supporting global efforts towards the effective governance of AI in security and defence.

The Global Conference on AI, Security and Ethics is set to be more than just a platform for discussion; it is intended to serve as a catalyst for action. Your support will demonstrate your commitment to driving progress, together, towards a more secue world.

Expression of Interest

The Call for Sponsorships is open until 1 March. UNIDIR will publicly acknowledge all supporters at the conference and in all relevant materials.
